DEMOCRACY AND "THE MASSES"

CONGRESSMAN STEPHENS (Dem.) of Texas, must have a strange constituency if his remarks in the house of representatives, recently, are a fair sample of what appeals to them. "The Republicans favor the masses," he said.

Does Mr. Stephens forget that Democratic tariff legislation threw 4,000,000 of the "masses" out of employment in 1913-1914?

Does Mr. Stephens forget that it was Republican constructive legislation that restored prosperity after the Cleveland administration?

Does Mr. Stephens forget that the Republican party passed the Postal Savings bank bill with the opposition of the banks and with every vote against it cast by a Democrat. Will Mr. Stephens tell how he voted on that measure?

Does Mr. Stephens forget that Republicans passed the pure food bill to protect the masses, the parcel post bill for the convenience of the masses, the reclamation law for the creation of new homes for the masses?

Will Mr. Stephens advocate the repeal of these measures passed by Republican congresses?

THEY ARE WELCOMED HOME

ELSEWHERE in this issue appears an interesting interview with a professional man, long a resident of Tonopah, who could not resist the wanderlust, whose feet itched, who saw beckoning fortune in the horizon's misty blue.

He answered the call, as do many old Nevadans, for after a time the desert really gets on a man's nerves, particularly on a woman's nerves and they must fly away. But he came back as nearly all come back, bettered by contact with the great outside world from which we have removed ourselves.

This professional man was bettered because he realized that while we have so many things lacking on the desert, we have so few of the unpleasant conditions that confront people elsewhere. There is less of companionship and co-operation than we have here. There is more pleasure taken in the small enjoyments of life, more social intercourse and a better chance to put by something for a rainy day. This professional man is welcomed back, as are all the migrators. We need them and they need us.

SCIENTIFIC CULTURE PAYS

LUTHER BURBANK laments the fact that the potato that he brought to such perfection, adding many millions to the world's wealth and averting famine, is likely to degenerate and almost become extinct. So weakened has it become through what might be termed inbreeding, that potato seed is becoming difficult to obtain, for the reason that the plants seem to have ceased to care for the preservation of their kind.

Scientific potato culture would redeem the race, but so few potato growers will take the trouble to go outside the established lines for producing the tubers. It is interesting to note that there is one grower in this state who devotes his head as well as his hands to this work. He is Harry Barrett of Mason Valley and only a week ago today he shipped some cases of potatoes to one of the wealthiest and most prominent men in New York City for which he obtained a price per pound that might almost be considered as the worth for a sack of the inferior grade.

AS UNWILLING AS BARKIS

PRESIDENT WILSON in a letter to the secretary of state for Ohio said that he is "unwilling to enter the contest for the nomination, but is ready to permit the use of his name in the coming primary in order that the Democrats of Ohio might make known their preference."

This the first time that the president has actually placed himself on record as to his candidacy and it is in no uncertain language, although as diplomatic as the dickens. In other words there is no misconstruing his meaning, although his words, if spoken in straightforward manner, would be construed as exactly the opposite.

There is a lot of peaceful force in the report that the trade between the United States and South American broke all records last year. The improvement in our commercial relations was slow in the beginning, partly because no one thought that the war could possibly last more than a few months and partly because there was a difficulty in the readjustment of credits, but it is now moving by leaps and bounds and Europe must be taking note of the fact that the longer the conflict lasts the more difficult it will be to win back her former share.—San Francisco Chronicle.

CLIPPED AND CREDITED

A New York boy committed suicide because he had a toothache. That is one way of curing it.—Florida Times Union.

Stallings has a five-year contract to manage the Boston team. It ought to be good for at least a two years' bluff.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

King Constantine is talking-mad. Had he been fighting-mad at first he would now have more standing room.—Atlanta Constitution.

This Frenchman who says he has just discovered how to make gold out of iron must never have heard of old man Carnegie.—Columbia State.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson says that one way to avoid gripe is to avoid sneezing. Sure! One way to avoid dying is keep on breathing.—Nashville Tennessean.

A Fargo, Minn., man pawned his wooden leg to raise money with which to go to the winter carnival at St. Paul. This shows the advantage of having a wooden leg when in a financial pinch.—New Orleans States.

Leave it to the woman. One in Columbus, O., has made a hat of fifty new $1 bills. In that case it is possibly worth the money.—Los Angeles Times.

No sane man could be expected to uphold the administration of the country on the record of the last two years.—Carrara Obelisk.

Colonel Roosevelt may be a headliner for the movies, but we don't cherish the slightest hope that he will be near so popular as Charlie Chaplin.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Conversation stockings are said to be the latest addition to millady's toilet. How adorable as a helpmeet for the earnest, conscientious, industrious man would be a woman so adorned!

Nothing Rude.

"I suppose your daughter will start her scholastic career with some special rudimentary studies?"

"No, indeed. There ain't going to be nothin' rude about it. She's goin' to take only polite literature."—Baltimore American.

His Opposite.

"They say people with opposite characteristics make the happiest marriages."

"Yes; that's why I'm looking for a girl with money."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Great Help.

"Did you have any one help you when you were hanging the pictures?"

"Oh, yes! My wife stood around and asked me what I was swearing at."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Some men do not make fortunes for the sake of living, but, blinded by avarice, live for the sake of money only.—Juvenal.

Playing Safe.

"I'm surprised to see you riding in the suburban smoker every day. You never use tobacco in any form, do you?"

"No, but if I ride in one of the other cars my wife expects me to be able to tell her what every lady on the train was wearing and whether it was becoming or not, and if I tell her she accuses me of taking too much interest in other women. If I can't tell her she says I'm too stupid for any kind of use."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Babylonia.

The northern part of Babylonia is generally dry during the greater part of the year. The lower part, near the junction of the rivers, is generally a great malarial swamp overgrown with reeds. In the springtime one may sail almost anywhere across the country from the Tigris to the Euphrates, and in the dry season great herds of camels, buffaloes, donkeys, sheep and goats graze over the same place.
